Let’s Talk About It
Hospitals Shouldn’t Accept the Unvaccinated

By Yvette Tello
I received an email from a reader that I would like to share with you this week.

"While waiting on a family member at a doctor’s office, I overheard the doctor’s conversation with his patient. “Why haven’t you been vaccinated?” the doctor asked. His patient retorted, “I did research, and decided not to take the vaccine.” Information on social media and Fox News is not research. Reading research data on medical journals like the New England Journal of Medicine, Journal of American Medical Association, and others is scientifically reliable information! Anti-vaxxers need not be treated at hospitals. They should go home and consult with social media. Anti-vaxxers have the freedom not to get vaccinated, but not the freedom to infect others! These desperate times call for desperate action. What do you think? Let’s talk about it…

Thomas Me: “To be honest, there is nothing to talk about. The CDC has research funding in the billions. Believe me, you cannot do more research than they do. The problem is to actually research means to be willing to commit to reading scientific papers that can be 20-100 pages long, interpret the data, charts, jargon etc… Then to do comparative research, you need to either sample dozens of other papers and see what the data aligns with or differentiates. Let’s be honest, how many people will do that? Fox News and others dumb down the reading to match the reading level of their readers. So, they (the readers) actually feel like they understand something and then say they have researched. LOL it’s a total joke. It takes time and practice to actually learn how to research. Hell, I’ve spent two semesters in grad school just learning how to do this the right way.”

Carmen Madariagis: “But, of course the Billion dollar industry has all the info we “need to know” right?! Nah! extremely wrong propaganda to further divide our flaking society! People need JESUS, just plain and simple! The evil in this world is metastasizing even further shorter time periods between changes in a clean environment. Prior to Covid, doctors didn’t wear masks to come to you and talk, but there was a chance something could get into their nose or mouth. Also, deciding who gets medical treatment based on arbitrary reason, be it vaccinated, or pre-existing conditions, or color of their skin, is just wrong.”

Kelly Narvaez: “I agree that everyone has the choice, however, choices need to have consequences. If you choose not to get the vaccine and say get hospitalized with COVID, it should be on your own dime, because you had the availability to prevent the infection. Now, say medically you cannot, then that’s a different scenario. Just like wearing a seatbelt, you choose not to wear it, and get in a wreck and cause harm to yourself, that’s on you. It’s no one else’s fault, but your own. You get in a car and drive drunk and wreck, you lose your license or go to jail. Every choice has a consequence in one way or another. Good or bad. Also, if you don’t want the vaccine fine, why not wear the mask so you can protect others. And all that BS about ‘low oxygen’ from masks, blah, blah blah... if this was the case, all the nurses and doctors who have worn them for centuries would all be dead or on oxygen so I don’t buy it. People have a problem with smoking in restaurants, but they can’t wear a piece of cloth to protect those who honestly have true risks of dying if contracted and I’m talking about those who can’t get the vaccine. It’s messed up thinking, if you ask me.”

Lonnie Bradley: “First, I am vaccinated, so this is not about me. The vaccine is new, a type not used before, and long term. We don’t know what it will do. It doesn’t prevent you from getting, nor passing on the virus. So, saying getting vaccinated to save others, is simply not the way it works. And the argument about doctors wearing masks also holds no credibility, as they wear masks for shorter time periods between changes in a clean environment.

Mary Svetlik Watkins: “Some people can’t get a vaccine. It’s a choice. We make the same choice for flu shots. People get and die from the flu. It is like being unhealthy by choice. The 500 pound guy in the motorized scooter wearing a diabetic alert band buying soda and a 5 gallon tub of ice cream shouldn’t seek medical care for his diabetes. Eat a salad and exercise.”

Rita Hayworth
Dubbed “the Great American Love Goddess” by Life magazine, Rita Hayworth was born Margarita Carmen Cansino in New York City in 1918. In 1935, she got her break in film when she was hired as a dancer in “Dante’s Inferno.” After altering her name and starring in “You’ll Never Get Rich” with Fred Astaire, Hayworth achieved fame and fortune. Over the next decade, she reigned as the undisputed sex goddess of Hollywood films and, according to the New York Times, “became famous around the world as an American serviceman’s pinup.” The hottest star at Columbia pictures, her movies “Cover Girl” (1944) and “Gilda” (1946) set all-time box-office records. After suffering from Alzheimer’s for many years, Hayworth passed away in May, 1987.

Each culture has treasures found in their traditions, language, food, music, dance and customs. Our Mexican-American, Hispanic, Latino, Chicano culture, call it as you may, is rich in cultural treasures. One of them is the celebration of the culture through dance and music and what a delight it is to experience the music and dance of the folklorico tradition. These two beautiful sisters are engaged in preparation for their next baile folklorico dance performance and are eager to share their love of the dance with others. These young dancers are continuing the traditions of our ancestors and giving voice to those that came before us and honoring their past, present and future with memorable song, dance and colorful apparel. I use family and friends for my subjects and the two folklorico dancers are my nieces, they are actual sisters and folklorico dancers. Featured on this page, is another painting that is very popular as a poster and it is my grandson in a Mexican bakery trying to decide which delicious pan dulce he's going to buy.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON TAX INCREASE

A tax rate of $0.301097 per $100 valuation has been proposed by the governing body of BEXAR COUNTY.

PROPOSED TAX RATE $0.301097 per $100
NO-NEW-REVENUE TAX RATE $0.298513 per $100
VOTER-APPROVAL TAX RATE $0.343885 per $100

The no-new-revenue tax rate is the tax rate for the 2021 tax year that will raise the same amount of property tax revenue for BEXAR COUNTY from the same properties in both the 2020 tax year and the 2021 tax year.

The voter-approval rate is the highest tax rate that BEXAR COUNTY may adopt without holding an election to seek voter approval of the rate.

The proposed tax rate is greater than the no-new-revenue tax rate. This means that BEXAR COUNTY is proposing to increase property taxes for the 2021 tax year.

A PUBLIC HEARING ON THE PROPOSED TAX RATE WILL BE HELD ON September 14, 2021 AT 10:00AM AT the Double-Height Courtroom on the second floor of the Bexar County Courthouse, 100 Dolorosa Street, Suite 2.01, San Antonio, TX 78205.

The proposed tax rate is not greater than the voter-approval tax rate. As a result, BEXAR COUNTY is not required to hold an election at which voters may accept or reject the proposed tax rate. However, you may express your support for or opposition to the proposed tax rate by contacting the members of the COMMISSIONERS COURT of BEXAR COUNTY at their offices or by attending the public hearing mentioned above.

YOUR TAXES OWED UNDER ANY OF THE RATES MENTIONED ABOVE CAN BE CALCULATED AS FOLLOWS:

Property tax amount= (tax rate) x (taxable value of your property)/100

FOR the proposal: County Judge N. Wolff, Commissioner R. Clay-Flores, Commissioner T. DeBerry, Commissioner T. Calvert, Commissioner J. Rodriguez

AGAINST the proposal: N/A

PRESENT and not voting: N/A

ABSENT: N/A

The 86th Texas Legislature modified the manner in which the voter-approval tax rate is calculated to limit the rate of growth of property taxes in the state.

The following table compares the taxes imposed on the average residence homestead by BEXAR COUNTY last year to the taxes proposed to be imposed on the average residence homestead by BEXAR COUNTY this year.

State Criminal Justice Mandate
The BEXAR COUNTY Auditor certifies that BEXAR COUNTY has spent $5,665,201 in the previous 12 months for the maintenance and operations cost of keeping inmates sentenced to the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. BEXAR COUNTY Sheriff has provided BEXAR COUNTY information on these costs, minus the state revenues received for reimbursement of such costs. This increased the no-new-revenue tax rate by $0.001316/$100.

Ante más de cinco mil espectadores que acudieron al estadio Toyota Field el sábado 4 de septiembre.

El equipo San Antonio Fútbol Club (SAFC por corto), en su sede el estadio Toyota Field recibió al duro rival Pittsburgh Riverhounds SC líder de la Conferencia del Este.

En lo qué fue la tradicional ceremonia de reconocimiento a Las Fuerzas Armadas de los Estados Unidos durante el feriado del Labor Day.

El tema fue "Military Appreciation Night 2021" qué fue copatrocinado por la compañía automotriz Toyota. Los jugadores del SAFC durante sesión de calentamiento previa al partido vistieron casaca de camuflaje militar. Las cuales posteriormente fueron autografiadas y puestas en venta ante su base de seguidores.

Los asistentes recibieron gratis minitualla alusivas al evento obsequiada por Toyota.

Antes del tradicional Himno Nacional, el gerente administrativo Tim Holt, presentó emotiva ceremonia reconocimiento al arquero estelar Matt Cardone por sus 100 partidos defendiendo el arco. Cardone aceptó fantástico cuadro alusivo y a la vez homenajeo al personal activo en el ejército y veteranos qué gloriosamente han servido al país en diversos conflictos bélicos salvaguardando a nuestra próspera nación.

El Himno Nacional fue cantado por la Staff Sergeant Gina Lavender, quien al final se llevó excelente aplauso de fanáticos, jugadores y directivos del SAFC.

La compañía cerveceria Michelob Ultra Light, una vez más ofreció su Noche del Dólar en cervezas de barril. Cardone destacó con tempranos salvamentos atajando disparos a gol. El medio tiempo fue patrocinado por HEB con el juego entre fans denominado "tic-tac-toe".

Así como extensa presentación en la pantalla central, donde Cardone, hizo público reconocimiento a la noble afición, directivos del SAFC y militares.

Resultados del partido: San Antonio (8-5-7), anotó gol en el segundo tiempo al minuto 61 con tanto de cabecita ejecutado por el delantero brasileño Nathan en asistencia de Marcus Epps. Los visitantes (24-6-5) dirigidos por Bob Lilley, sin darse por vencidos al minuto 90 empataron la pizarra 1-1 con gol de Alex Dixon quienes aprovechó asistencia de Louis Pérez.

"En tres partidos hemos ganado 7 puntos, Pittsburgh Riverhounds SC es gran equipo líder del Este. Creo qué los superamos en la cancha tanto en la ofensiva como defensiva. Doy crédito al empate sé luchó hasta el final y ganamos una unidad", dijo el timonel Alen Marcina del SAFC. (Fotos de Franco)
Vyas Sarabu, second year medical student at University of Texas Health Science Center at San Antonio (UTHSCSA), is one of the medical students conducting a community needs assessment regarding “what has motivated people to get the Covid-19 vaccine, specifically with Latino Communities, what has helped people in the Latino Community get the Covid-19 vaccine, what are their feelings on the process of getting the vaccine, and how do they feel about things in the future with the vaccine, like boosters and variants,” states Sarabu.

This research project is geared toward our gente, because “historically, we found that Latino communities have been underserved medically, and especially with the vaccines. We looked at the data and have seen that a lot of Latino communities maybe aren’t getting the resources that they deserve. So our goal with these focus groups is to hear from [people] like you in the community, better understand what your experience is with the vaccine, and how we can create resources to help people like you get the vaccine,” explains Sarabu.

Focus groups, of about 20-30 people, will be held virtually over Zoom and will only take an hour of your time. Compensation for your time will be a $20 gift card. UTHSCSA have openings for two more focus groups this week:
- September 15, 2021, Spanish focus group from 6pm-7pm.
- September 16, 2021, English focus group from 6pm-7pm.

The focus groups they conducted thus far “have gone very well. It’s a positive atmosphere, it’s a safe space. Everybody is welcome to come.”

“We just want to have a conversation, get to know you better, get to know why you got the vaccine better, and just learn more about your experience,” concludes Sarabu.

SA KIDS BREATHE y su impacto positivo en el asma pediátrica

Por Daniel Deane, MD El asma es un proceso inflamatorio complejo. Muchos factores externos afectan el control del asma y son difíciles de identificar en el corto periodo de tiempo de una visita al consultorio. Es posible que no se revelen todos los factores desencadenantes del hogar ni se expongan los determinantes sociales perjudiciales. SA Kids BREATHE (SAKB) es un gratuito de la programa ciudad que proporciona una evaluación integral del hogar y descubre determinantes sociales adversos. SA Kids BREATHE son las siglas de Building Relationships, Effective ASTHMA Enseñanza en entornos domésticos. Estos niños necesitan referencias médicas.

El corazón de una relación terapéutica exitosa es la comunicación efectiva entre el médico y el paciente. Cuanto más tiempo pase un médico con un paciente, mejor será el resultado. El énfasis actual del entorno de atención de la salud en la productividad puede socavar esta relación.

SAKB no reemplaza al médico, pero trabaja para volver a conectar a los pacientes con sus cuidadores y ampliar el impacto del médico en la educación. Proporciona información sobre el entorno del hogar y muestra los impactos perjudiciales de los determinantes sociales, lo que ayudará a orientar las decisiones terapéuticas.

Los trabajadores comunitarios de la salud capacitados (TSC) se reúnen con la familia y el niño donde se encuentran, en el hogar o virtualmente, para educar a los niños y sus familias sobre formas efectivas de controlar el asma. Los TSC realizan de cinco a seis visitas a las familias durante un periodo de seis meses. De tres a cuatro visitas son a domicilio y duran una hora. Una visita es con un proveedor de atención médica y la otra con la escuela o la guardería del niño.

Cada TSC es guiado por un terapeuta respiratorio certificado y un educador certificado en asma con más de 30 años de experiencia. Y los ASC están trabajando para convertirse en educadores certificados en asma. Las visitas domiciliarias son valiosas porque ofrecen a los TSC la oportunidad de realizar evaluaciones que son difíciles en un entorno clínico. Aplican la Lista de verificación ambiental del asma de la Agencia de Protección Ambiental al entorno del hogar para identificar y remediar los desencadenantes. También reconocen los determinantes sociales que afectan el control del asma de un niño y brindan ayuda y apoyo.

Cuando los TSC educan a los niños y sus familias en sus hogares, los médicos tienen más tiempo para implementar cambios terapéuticos cuando el paciente llega a la clínica, lo que refuerza el vínculo entre el médico y el paciente. El TSC puede visitar la clínica con la familia, lo que permite la identificación oportuna de los cambios preocupantes en los síntomas de su hijo. El CHW también es una línea directa de comunicación con la enfermera de la escuela. Las comunicaciones con médicos y enfermeras se pueden mantener a través de correo electrónico seguro (si la clínica tiene capacidades), contacto telefónico directo y/o fax.

Los principios fundamentales de SAKB tienen éxito en proporcionar habilidades de autocuidado a pacientes con asma en programas similares en todo el país (1,2) y representan los principios de la atención basada en valores. SAKB mantiene las habilidades adecuadas de administración de medicamentos, identifica y elimina los desencadenantes irritantes y alérgicos en el hogar y reconoce la contribución de las alergias que pueden necesitar una evaluación más extensa.

By Dr. Ricardo Romo

In my fifty years of academic life, I have interacted with hundreds of scholars and graduate students. When I first met Americo Paredes I knew I had encountered a true “Renaissance man.” Don Americo’s career included journalism, radio broadcasting, scholarship, and college teaching. He spoke and wrote Spanish and English with ease and was among the first to author scholarly books about Texas-Mexican Borderland folklore and Mexican American anthropology. He published several novels as well as books on his poetry. He sang and played the guitar exceptionally well.

I first learned of Americo Paredes’ outstanding books, in particular, With His Pistol in His Hand, when I began teaching Chicano History in 1970. In the fall semester of 1970, I was hired to teach history for the Chicano Studies Department at San Fernando Valley State College in Southern California. The department, founded by Dr. Rodolfo Acuna, was but a year old and thanks to Acuna’s excellent teaching, enrollment in the Chicano history classes more than doubled. Paredes’ With His Pistol in His Hand was one of the more popular books that Dr. Acuna suggested.

Initially became familiar with Americo Paredes’ reputation when I attended UT Austin in the early 1960s. Several of my friends, including Raymund Paredes and Jose Limon, took his classes, but I never had that good fortune. At the time UT Austin’s two best-known Mexican American professors were Americo Paredes who taught English, Folklore, and Anthropology, and George I. Sanchez, a distinguished education professor. Carlos Castaneda, perhaps the first Mexican American to earn tenure at UT Austin’s College of Liberal Arts, taught full-time in the History Department over the years 1946-1958.

My personal interactions with Don Americo, as he was known to many of his friends, began in 1977. That year I was teaching at the University of California San Diego [UCSD], and I received a small grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to sponsor a conference on Mexican American Studies.

I asked Americo Paredes and Tomas Rivera to serve as mentors and principal discussants at the conference.

In preparation for this conference, I invited Don Americo to the UCSD campus where I served as a member of the history faculty and Chair of Chicano Studies. Over his three-day stay, Don Americo and I toured the campus, visited Chicano community organizations, and explored Tijuana, Mexico where we had lunch. Our in-depth conversations began that day. Professor Paredes shared with me his thoughts about the borderlands, noting, for example, some of the differences between South Texas and the Southern California border of Tijuana-Mexico. One difference was that the border town of San Diego in the mid-1970s still had a large Anglo population which numbered nearly 600,000 of a total population of 700,000. Latinos were estimated at slightly less than 60,000 or just under 20 percent of the San Diego border population. In contrast, Mexican Americans comprised the vast majority in all the Texas-Mexican border towns stretching from Brownsville to El Paso.

Don Americo was born in the Texas Borderland town of Brownsville in 1915. He grew up speaking Spanish and hearing corridos and border stories from his father. His community was nearly 90 percent Mexican-American during that era as it is to the present day. As a high school student, young Americo won prizes for his poetry and published poems in La Prensa. He attended the local community college and worked as a reporter for the Brownsville Herald.

Paredes told me that in the 1930s he also hosted a radio show where he was spontaneously called upon to sing songs listeners requested. When I asked him how many songs he had memorized, he responded—over 500. Many were the border ballads and corridos that he had learned growing up. He also recounted a story about meeting the Tejana singer Chelo Silva on the radio show. They had a brief courtship and married soon after.

Don Americo served in the military following the 1941 attack on U.S. ships at Pearl Harbor. The Army put his literary skills to good use assigning him to write and edit the Stars and Stripes, the military newspaper. Don Americo and Chelo Silva divorced during the war years due to the difficulties of separation from home for extended periods. After the war, Paredes remained in the service and was stationed in Japan with a new assignment—covering Japanese war crimes.

On numerous occasions, Don Americo mentioned the story about meeting his future wife Amelia at the USO in Toyko. He was intrigued by her knowledge of the Spanish language. Her language skills were a result of her father’s diplomatic assignment in Uruguay before the war years. While in Montevideo, her father had met and married Amelia’s Uruguayan mother.

Don Americo and his new wife returned to Texas and moved to Austin. He enrolled at UT Austin where he finished his BA, MA, and Ph.D. in six short years. His first teaching post was in El Paso, but after a year at UT El Paso, he was offered a job in the English Department at UT Austin.

In 1979, Don Americo invited me to apply to be the director of Mexican American Studies at UT Austin, a program he had started in 1970 with education professor Dr. George I. Sanchez. Don Americo sent my resume to the UT History Department with hopes that they would interview me. The Department faculty responded with a request for an interview with me and in 1980 the Department hired me. I became only the second Latino, after Dr. Carlos Castaneda, to teach in the more than 80 member UT Austin History Department.

Over the decade of the 1980s, as I taught History of the Southwest, Civil Rights, and Urban History, I visited on a regular basis with Don Americo. In the late 1980s, we made an informal pact to have coffee together once a week. We were often joined by Latino professors from other departments including Rolando-Hinojosa-Smith, Ramon Saldívar, David Montejano, and Manuel Pena. The Paredes family also hosted small dinners for the Mexican American faculty, and we became friends with Amelia and her mother who lived with them.

It was in those informal settings that I learned firsthand about Don Americo’s life and his journey to becoming one of the most respected Mexican American scholars in America. Don Americo retired in 1984 but remained connected with colleagues in English and Anthropology. Excellent works on his life have been published by professors Jose Limon, Ramon Saldívar, Ben Holguin, and Manuel Medrano.

Don Americo passed away in 1999 at the age of 83. At the request of the family, I arranged a Despedida at a large conference space on the UT Austin campus. The commentary by his colleagues and friends proved that Don Americo Paredes was more than a “Renaissance man”---he was a beloved human being, scholar, mentor, and teacher.

Their Names Were The Same As My Neighbors

By George Cisneros

Who were these people smiling from faded photographs at me? Were they really strangers when their eyes, lips, noses, and skin pushed out familiarity and kinships? Were they the distant cousins I never met because my grandparents fled Puebla as intellectuals, writers, labor leaders were being arrested and executed? And the names – Garcia, Alvaro, Ponce, Bautista, Cantu, Cruz and Mejia – were those of people who live in my San Antonio precinct.

These faces, now, taped, stapled, nailed, and glued to fences, subway walls, telephone poles, and bus shelters, should not be forgotten. They, too, are the faces of our national experiment of Liberty and Justice for All. They are a tribute to the thousands of people whose lives tragically were extinguished so brutally on a beautiful morning, perhaps best appreciated with the view from Windows of the World Restaurant.

These photographs are purely accidental. My presence in New York City was encouraged by my friend Susan Ginsberg, a renowned contemporary art historian and dealer. She had been told a story from an NHK Japanese reporter of possible arrests and detentions of Mexican and Central American family members who had gone to the official victim search center by the INS. It sounded plausible and would be in the realm of possibility that the major media outlets would choose to steer clear of investigative stories and not pursue stories that would cast any doubt or criticism on Federal and other policing authorities. The nation needed to trust the government. There was a national unity of emotions and patriotism unseen since Pearl Harbor was attacked just short of sixty years prior to that eventful 9/11.

With only my SONY Mavica and notebook, I arrived in New York on September 31, 2001, twenty days post-9/11. I had a low-level clearance as a photographer with access to be near but not within the high-clearance areas within the pit. The story I wanted to present had somewhat evaporated because the street talk was that President Zedillo had made a strong protest to President Bush. The practice was halted and families were released. And of course, nothing was reported in the news.

Over the next three days, I wandered through lower Manhattan and became aware of the thousands of handwritten and photocopied posters and flyers families had made and distributed in their search for missing loved ones. These were worth preserving.

NEED A RIDE? LET US KNOW
By Jackie Velez

Award-winning filmmaker, actress, screenwriter, producer, and creator, Felise Garcia, is creating opportunities for women in the film and television industry.

Garcia has penned many stories since the age of seven. She earned an associate’s degree in English from San Antonio College and a bachelor’s degree in English from the University of Texas at San Antonio. She pursued acting ten years ago, which led her to an interest in screenwriting.

“When I started acting and got curious about the scripts and the different things that were involved in bringing the characters to life, I decided to start learning how to screenwrite,” said Garcia.

Garcia quickly learned how competitive the acting industry was and how limited the roles for television and film were in Texas. Garcia was tired of waiting around for an opportunity to come to her, so she utilized her writing, acting, and management skills to create her web series, “The Honey Trapper.” The show dives into deceit and dares to ask the question: If your significant other were presented with the temptation to cheat, would they choose to stray or stay?

The show is about a woman who decides to start a professional honey trapping business and soon realizes that nothing is as black and white as it seems. It leaves the audience with the question: It beg to the question, people can research cars, schools, and houses, so why not research the person you plan to spend the rest of your life with? This addictive show proved to be the best idea for Garcia as it has won multiple awards, especially for season two.

Garcia is the vice-president of the non-profit organization Women in Film and Television in San Antonio. WIFT San Antonio is one of many chapters in Texas and is part of the national organization WIFT United States. There are WIFT chapters in Dallas, Houston, and Austin. San Antonio is the latest Texas chapter to be added to the organization. Garcia got involved in WIFT when she and the current president of WIFT, Michelle Faires, met during a filmmaker happy hour. Garcia and Faires connected, and shortly after, they began developing WIFT San Antonio. Garcia wanted to create WIFT San Antonio to help other women learn about it. She didn't want anyone else to have experience the difficulty she had when she first entered the film industry. Garcia had to educate herself on the ins and outs of film and she wants to prevent women from going through their film careers with the same issues.

“What WIFT is providing is all this education that goes into filmmaking for people,” said Garcia. “WIFT is a really great place for education and networking for women.”

There are four levels for those interested in joining WIFT: professional, associate, friend, and student. You can email WIFT at wiftsanantonio@gmail.com for membership information.

Garcia also established a new production company, Stigma Strikes Production. Some of the common themes in the stories she has written involve characters that break the traditional stigmas, and that’s why she chose the name Stigma Strikes.

“I want to give voices to those people that normally get judged,” said Garcia. “On top of all of the other hats that Garcia wears, she is also an executive assistant to the Hollywood-based acting coach, Coach Dock. Garcia is assisting Dock in building his acting classes. Garcia credits Dock in changing her life for the better. Coach Dock has been teaching in Houston, Texas for a couple of years. Garcia’s agent, who is based in Austin, set up a Zoom meeting with Coach Dock to convince him to teach classes in Austin. Garcia was finally able to meet Dock in Austin during one of his trips there. Garcia noticed that Dock didn’t have marketing materials for any of the classes he offered. Garcia offered to help Coach Dock market his acting classes on social media.

“That’s how I got promoted to executive assistant, so now I’m working on the marketing materials, handling socials,” said Garcia. “I don’t know how he handled all the Texas stuff before I was doing it for him.”

Felise Garcia is definitely not limiting herself to one avenue. She still has goals that she wants to fulfill. One of her hopes for the future is that aspiring actors, screenwriters, and producers take those dreams seriously and create their own content, especially now that Hollywood seems to be changing in terms of diversity.

“The most change I strongly feel is gonna be we have more diverse people behind the camera and writing the stories,” said Garcia.
